

Front Page	ESR Page	Other Page
---------------	-------------	---------------

DANVILLE, VA.

BEE

E. 15,110

FEB 21 1966

Better Spies Needed

The Central Intelligence Agency is this country's means of competing in the intricate field of worldwide espionage. A handful of students at Grinnell College in Iowa discovered a CIA recruiter of the campus and acted as if they had unearthed a foreign spy. It seems that some people consider such a recruitment program incongruous. What's wrong with seeking America's best qualified manpower for its most sensitive work?